Internships

Taking exchanges in Asian countries provides me the global exposure useful to my internships. Google is the place where I felt like I was fully utilising my ABS experience because of its global presence and diversity. Having initiated projects on lead generation in the China market required me to be very proactive in communicating with a lot of stakeholders and being strategic with an in-depth understanding of the market which I would not be able to deliver without the solid foundation ABS has trained us.

Yannie YEUNG

Internship at Google
Hong Kong

Working as an investment banking summer analyst at Wells Fargo was a genuinely fruitful experience for me to handle Asian bond issuance and cross-border acquisition between Asia and the U.S.. One interesting fact I learnt was that helping and communicating with your client was not just about maths and finance, it required a deep understanding of their businesses, and more importantly - their cultures. Thanks to ABS, my Asian insights were cultivated through the exchange journey. Today, I am happy to know my multi-cultural exposures are valued when I pursue my dream job.

Overseas Exposures

Ron HSU
Internship at PwC
Shanghai

Working as an intern in the PwC Shanghai office, I took part in real projects with an intrapreneurship team under the Priority Service Department. I not only explored the structure of a big corporate but also perceived the atmosphere of a start-up organisation. With the combination of academic learning and practical training, I had better understood the trends in mainland China, realised the rapid development of an emerging market and discovered endless opportunities. I have also expanded my connections and learnt to embrace the diversity of Asia on my ABS journey.

Maggie MAK
Internship at Edelman
Shanghai

Flashing back to my exchange life in Shanghai, I spent most of my time on my internship, so as most of the other ABS students. As a consumer team intern for Edelman Shanghai, not only did I produce a range of marketing materials and reports, I also got opportunities to join some of their big PR events as helpers. Working in a different country was such a unique experience as you can boost your language skills, experience different working style and practices, and most importantly, learn how to get along with the people there. Such international and interpersonal exposure to Shanghai workplace is a strong asset of ABS which enables us to know about a country truly.

It was not about winning, but enjoying the moment and making impacts - helping our client to rethink the business model, to reconnect with the minorities, and to renew the society. Our 3R strategy - Rethink, Reconnect and Renew, conveyed our team spirit through storytelling and delivering our messages with sparks of ideas. This experience was fun and rewarding.

World Asian Case Competition

The World Asian Case Competition (WACC) must be the most remarkable, yet one of the most challenging business case competitions that I have taken part in so far. This international competition lasted for 4 months. Teams from top universities are required to analyse problems of and provide strategic recommendations for an Asian brand by means of proposals, reports and a final presentation.

For all 4 months before the final presentation, I was studying abroad in Tokyo while my partner was interning in Beijing. Face-to-face conversation has become impossible. We have had hard times on sharing information and communication, not to mention there was literally no chance for us to meet up for a full presentation practice! Difficult it was, WACC was a valuable global stage to learn from business dignitaries and the most unforgettable competition in my university life.
